Work by Katherine Bernhardt, Paul Thek, Caroline Walker, and other artists shattered their estimates this season. In auction world, the evening sales get all the attention, but the day sales are undersung for their ability to give a special kind of bird's eye view on the state of play in the art market. These perfunctory operations usually offer substantial insight not only into what's hot right now, but also into where the market is headed—and which artists and bodies of work are attracting notice.
